Chapter 1 by Eva

I walked in the heat of the sun, with sweat drips falling into my eyes. I wiped my forehead and walking faster and faster. I couldn't bear to stay in this heat for any longer. I finally saw the large house up a head. I just needed to run and never go back out side again. I collapsed on the sofa and decided to enter my dreams. I dreamed for hours and then suddenly opened my eyes, I realised that everything around the house was trashed and broken. There was not one sound from the house, everyone was gone.

I was an orphan all my family was dead. I decided to enter my dream world and stay there forever where every thing was good and exciting. so I did. But was every thing good and exciting?

Chapter 2 by -

Even in my dreamland awful things crept in. Sometimes, dreams would merge into nightmares, and I would jerk up frightened.

I always imagined the same thing for starts. My dream world looked something like this...

Mom was a tall, beautiful, loving woman with compassion. Dad was a strong, handsome, commanding man who had a family and kingdom. I was a smart, sweet, adorable girl.

Life would be going along perfectly, until the king went away to help fight another kingdom's war. Then, everything would decline from there, and I would wake up and pretend it didn't happen.

But every time I dreamed, the same thing would occur. Mom would be risked away by evil men. The whole kingdom would be destroyed, and I would be left alone, orphaned.

The whole reason I had my imaginary world was to escape from my lonely life, the last thing I wanted to think about was my depressing state!

And yet, it persisted.
